BRAD PHALIN - MARKETING AND COMMUNICATIONS

• ABC News anchor Charles Gibson meets students in the political science class taught by Dr. Melissa K. Miller during the network's bus tour. "Gibson visited my Introduction to American Government class (POLS 1100) Oct. 7, 2008," Dr. Miller said. "This particular section of POLS 1100 was a "BG Experience" section, meaning that it was comprised of 27 exclusively first-year students."

MAY 12 – Honor Flight program and luncheon at Stone Ridge Golf Club.

POLITICAL scientist Melissa K. Miller will examine Hillary Clinton's fight for the Presidency during her presentation in Bowling Green on Wednesday, April 14, at the joint luncheon for BGSU and University of Toledo retirees. Check-in begins at 11:30 a.m.

This year the BGSU Retirees Association is host for the luncheon, which will be held at Stone Ridge Golf Club in southwest Bowling Green, off West Wooster Street (see map on page 2). Serving begins at noon. Cost is $17.

Dr. Miller, an assistant professor in BGSU's Political Science Department since 2005, holds a bachelor's degree from Cornell, a master's from Harvard, and the PhD from Northwestern. Previously she taught at Northwestern and at East Stroudsburg (Pa.) University.

For more than 15 years she also held research positions, including a year as senior researcher at the National Centre for Social Research in London, England.

Dr. Miller's political science class was highlighted during the broadcast of "World News with Charles Gibson," part of the network's coverage of the second Presidential debate. In Dr. Miller's classroom, Gibson gauged student support for Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain and canvassed their opinions on various issues. Much to the surprise of Dr. Miller and her students, Gibson conveyed their views on Social Security to Obama in an exclusive interview that aired the following evening from Indiana.

"The University was in the national spotlight when ABC visited, and it truly put its best face forward," said President Carol Cartwright. "I am very proud of our students, who were so thoughtful and articulate, and our faculty, who opened their classrooms." □

They're "Falcon Flames"

By Gaynelle Myers Predmore, "He Followed Me Home One Day," in Centennial Memories, Item #6108

EDUCATIONAL Psychology class was always a fun one when taught by Drs. Bernie Rabin, Peter Wood and Richard Burke. The quarter I took it the three sections did projects together. One such session included a small group on discovering the inner you or some such title.

I recall Greg Predmore first identifying himself to the group as being shy. We all had to go around the circle and give some sort of adjective that described ourselves. I could identify with that as I felt shy in new situations, too. We sat close to each other and I think I had said "hi" at the beginning of the session. Greg was the first volunteer to sit in the center of the group and tell us what he perceived about himself and what was going on around him. I was amazed and impressed. I couldn't believe this shy guy from Findlay, Ohio, would volunteer for such a venture.

After class, I think I said something to the effect that I was impressed with his behavior. Then I left to head back to Mac East. I kept noticing someone behind me, but didn't think much of it until I reached the residence hall door. It was Greg. He spoke up. He asked me if I wanted to go to the Octoberfest Saturday. Being again impressed with his courage, I immediately said yes and then he left for Rodgers... We were married Sept. 8, 1979, and have lived happily ever after, for the most part!

• Gaynelle, who works in Jerome Library, will retire later this year with more than 30 years as a BGSU employee. Greg retired last year from Other Fields and Facilities.
