GRADUATE

Summer Session I

Course: Gero 6800 MW 11:30 am-2:40 pm

Course Description
In this seminar, we will examine the gendered experience of aging. Using a framework of Life Course and Feminist Perspectives, we will investigate topics of family relationships, work and retirement, physical and mental health, and leisure to guide our discussion of how aging is a difference experience for men and women.

Dr. Wendy Watson

Course: MC 6400 Humanistic Research Methods

Course Description
The purpose of this course is to introduce you to qualitative humanistic communication research methods, the logic and philosophy of such methods, and innovations/controversies in these methods. We will examine general qualitative research methods and feminist methodology, analysis used by communication scholars (and those in related fields), specifically interviews, observations, narrative analysis, ethnography, autoethnography, grounded theory, arts-based research, and content coding. In addition, we will discuss the ethical considerations in conducting human participant research.

Dr. Sandra Faulkner

Summer Session II

Course: WS 6200 Contemporary Feminist Theory (Online)

Course Description
An introduction to the principal conceptual bases underlying feminist theory across the disciplines. Examination of language, literature, film, religion, philosophy, history, psychoanalysis, developmental psychology, and politics. Approved for distance education.

Dr. Sarah Smith Rainey
UNDERGRADUATE

Summer session: 6-1
Course #: WS 2000, 101W, 40581
Topic Title (if applicable): Intro to Women's Studies
On-line
Dr. Oppo Zongo

Summer session: 6-1
Course #: WS 3000/ACS 3000
Topic Title (if applicable): Fat Studies
On-line
JoAnna Murphy

Course #: WS 3000/POPC 4600 101 W
Topic Title (if applicable): Bisexuality in Film and TV
On-line
Diana DePasquale

Summer session: 6-2
Course #: ACS 3000/ WS 3000
Topic Title (if applicable): Drag Culture
On-line
Brock Webb

Summer session: 6-2
Course #: WS 2000, 102W, 40582
Topic Title (if applicable): Intro to Women's Studies
On-line
Dr. Sarah Smith Rainey