School of Cultural and Critical Studies
Adjunct Instructor Position(s)

Details: The School of Cultural and Critical Studies at Bowling Green State University seeks strong applicants for part-time teaching assignments in the areas of: American Culture Studies (ACS), Ethnic Studies (ETHN), Popular Culture (POPC), Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies (WS), Public History, and Cultural and Critical Studies (CCS). In their letter of application, applicants should clearly identify the field(s) in which they are qualified to teach. Successful candidates may teach introductory courses in these fields including Introduction to ETHN (ETHN 1010), Introduction to WS (WS 2000), Introduction to ACS (ACS 2000), Cultural Pluralism in the U.S. (ACS 2500), Introduction to Popular Culture (POPC 1600), and Black Popular Culture (POPC 1700). Qualified applicants may also be offered part-time teaching assignments in more specialized undergraduate and graduate courses in these units, including courses that contribute to the Public History graduate certificate. Starting date of employment is August 2017.

Qualifications: Ph.D. in relevant discipline preferred. Minimum requirement is an M.A. Evidence of successful teaching at the collegiate level is preferred. For Public History positions, professional experience in the field is strongly preferred.

Application: Applicants should submit: 1) letter of application outlining qualifications relevant to this position, 2) full curriculum vita, and 3) two current, original letters of reference. Finalists will be required to submit official transcripts indicating highest degree and to authorize and pass a background check prior to offer of employment. Submit application materials electronically to: Amy Davidson, amyd@bgsu.edu, using the Subject Heading ‘SCCS PT Faculty Search’. Questions? Contact Dr. Angela Nelson, Acting School Director, at anelson@bgsu.edu.
