V. Curriculum Development

2004	Developed a new graduate course entitled Statistical Techniques and Applications in Sociology . This course is designed to simultaneously introduce students to statistics and statistical software packages.
2001	Developed the interdisciplinary undergraduate minor Demographic Studies . This unique minor provides students with rigorous training in the area of population studies.

- 2001 Created the undergraduate course Introduction to Applied Demography. This course focuses on the source and accuracy of demographic information, computer techniques used to access census data and provides an overview of key demographic tools.
- 2000 Directed the refocusing of the sociology graduate program to include four focal areas. As a consequence, degree requirements in all areas were also restructured.
- 1999 Developed the undergraduate course Introduction to Demographic Techniques. This course focuses methods of measurement for enumeration and registration data, the construction of life tables, an introduction to measures of fertility, nuptiality, migration and mortality; and the examination of census variables.

VI. Professional Development

- 2007 Participated in a three day workshop IPUMS workshop at the University of Minnesota.
- 2005 Participated in the Qualitative Methods workshop at the Population Association of America (PAA) meetings.
- 2001 Participated in the GIS workshop at the PAA meetings.
- 1998 Participated in a three day workshop on Brazilian Vital Statistics at the meetings of the Brazilian Association of Demographic Studies.
