Setting Prefs for the Mozilla Rich Text Editing Demo

To protect users' private information, unprivileged scripts cannot invoke the Cut, Copy, and Paste commands in the Mozilla rich text editor, so the corresponding buttons on the Mozilla Rich Text Editing demo page will not work. To enable these functions for purposes of the demo, you must modify your browser preferences.

For Firefox:

1. Quit Firefox. If you have Quick Launch running (in Windows, an icon in the toolbar), quit that too.
2. Find your Firefox profile directory. On Windows, this is often located in

C:\Documents and Settings\<<Windows login>\Application
Data\Mozilla\Firefox\Profiles\<<one folder>.

(See also editing configuration files (<http://www.mozilla.org/support/firefox/edit>) for more info on locating your profile folder.)

3. Open the user.js file from that directory in a text editor. If there's no user.js file, create one.
4. Add these lines to user.js:

user_pref("capability.policy.policynames", "allowclipboard");
user_pref("capability.policy.allowclipboard.sites", "http://www.mozilla.org");
user_pref("capability.policy.allowclipboard.Clipboard.cutcopy", "allAccess");
user_pref("capability.policy.allowclipboard.Clipboard.paste", "allAccess");

*Change the url "http://www.mozilla.org" to where you want to enable this function.

5. Save the file, and restart Firefox. The Clipboard buttons should now function.

Note: The preference is site as well as protocol specific. For example

user_pref("capability.policy.allowclipboard.sites", "http://www.mozilla.org");
```

is not the same as

```
user_pref("capability.policy.allowclipboard.sites", "https://www.mozilla.org");

(the first is http and the second is https)
