Trustees extend alternative retirement plan to classified staff

Many BGSU classified staff members may now choose an alternative retirement plan.

The board of trustees on Sept. 30 expanded the option to classified staff to comply with a recent change in Ohio law that extended eligibility for participation in such a plan to all full-time employees of public colleges and universities.

Full-time faculty and administrative staff gained the alternative retirement plan option in January 1999, but classified staff members weren't eligible under the law at that time.

Thomas Trimboli, general counsel, said the option will be available to newly hired classified staff and to those with less than five years' service at the University as of last Aug. 1. The amendment to BGSU's plan allows participants to divide their retirement account among multiple providers, he added.

Lorrie Sawaie, Student Academic Achievement and vice chair of Classified Staff Council, welcomed the board's action and said "it brings some equity across the playing field."

On another matter, the trustees endorsed the establishment of a non-profit research institute to promote commercialization of faculty-developed innovations.

Although commercialization has academic benefits for students and researchers and can lead to an increased number of sponsored research awards, BGSU has not pursued it, Trimboli pointed out. A primary reason, he continued, is "the lack of specialized expertise and a dedicated effort" to promote the marketing of University inventions.

Commercialization involves multiple strategies, including marketing to existing companies, starting wholly owned new companies or sharing equity ownership in start-up companies with outside investors, Trimboli noted.

Many universities in Ohio and other states have established research foundations to encourage and market their inventions. Because Ohio law doesn't allow a state entity to have an ownership interest in a private company, BGSU's proposed institute would be separate and independent, and therefore capable of taking an ownership interest, if appropriate, he said. Funding is being sought.

"If we're going to be competitive as a research institution, the institute will give us a tool to stimulate research," added President Sidney Ribeau.

Also at the meeting, the trustees approved a request for state capital funding that will be submitted to the Ohio Board of Regents.

In the request, priority projects for fiscal years 2007-08 are an addition to the Student Health Center and replacement of the Saddlemire Student Services Building.

The health center addition will create new square footage for Student Health Services, the Wellness Center, the Counseling Center and Disability Services. Existing health services space will be renovated as well, to accommodate the movement of the Medical Technology program from the Life Sciences Building, where needed laboratory space will be freed up as a result.

A feasibility study of the Saddlemire building indicated that it would cost 5 percent more to renovate the existing structure than to build a new one. In addition, space utilization would be more efficient in a new building than in the current round one. Those factors, along with the space needs of the planned Wolfe Center and the desirability of placing it between the music and fine arts centers, have led to the decision to replace Saddlemere with a new, smaller student services building elsewhere on campus.

The new facility would house the Student Affairs, Student Employment, Cooperative Education, Multicultural Affairs and Student Legal Services offices, as well as the Career Center.

The request asks for $17,850,000 in state funds for the two projects, and projects the local share of funding for them at $31,790,000.

The priority project for fiscal years 2009-10 is University Hall rehabilitation, while those listed for 2011-12 are rehabilitation of Hanna Hall, Moseley Hall and utility infrastructure.

In other Sept. 30 business, the trustees:

- Directed the administration to meet immediately with representatives of the International Union of Police Associations Local 103, representing campus police, to continue negotiations on a new contract. The directive came in conjunction with the board's rejection of a fact-finder's recommendation that base pay rates for union members increase by 45 percent over the next three years.

The previous three-year pact between the University and Local 103 expired last April.

- Ratified a preliminary agreement with Calderon Properties Ltd. to proceed with investigations of development of Calderon-owned property at Interstate 75 and Dunbridge Road. Completion of a feasibility study is expected in early 2006.

A Calderon representative inquired last fall about the University's interest in development of the property, and the two parties are exploring the possibility of a mixed-use complex that BGSU would lease from the company.

The facility could serve academic needs—as a site to establish new learning communities and explore the use of alternative energy sources, for example—as well as providing reasonably priced housing for students and new faculty.

- Mandated health insurance coverage for undergraduate students, effective next fall. The requirement includes a "hard waiver" provision, meaning that students who already have adequate insurance can opt out of the BGSU-offered plan, said Dr. Glenn Egelman, director of Student Health Services.

Requiring coverage will help ensure that students have adequate insurance, which, in turn, could help with controlling costs and retaining students who have health issues, Egelman said.

- Granted emeritus status to retired faculty members F. Dennis Hale, journalism; Linda Lander, School of Human Movement, Sport and Leisure Studies, and Floris Wood, University Libraries.

Robin Euler wins Ferrari Award

A problem solver," "calm excellence under fire," "resourceful" and "responsible" are some of the words used to describe Robin Euler, winner of this year's Michael R. Ferrari Award.

The annual award, the highest honor given to administrative staff members at Bowling Green, was presented by the person for whom it was named—former BGSU administrator Michael "Mick" Ferrari—at the Administrative Staff Fall Reception Sept. 27.

Euler, a grants development specialist in the Office of Sponsored Programs and Research, received a $1,000 check, a plaque in her honor and a reserved parking space for a year.

Simply being nominated for the award was an honor, the Bowling Green resident said. As for the feeling of joining the group of past recipients, “there’s just no words for it,” she added.

Her nominators expressed their appreciation for her help in obtaining funding for their research projects. “We believe that Robin clearly personifies each and every one of the attributes honored by the award—innovation and initiative, performance, and relationship with the University community,” they wrote.

“For many years, Robin has demonstrated great dedication to Bowling Green State University and the highest level of professionalism. Her excellent work in SPAR is universally respected by BGSU faculty who have written externally funded grant projects. Robin’s contributions are critical to the success that we and other grant recipients at BGSU have achieved.”

Euler is highly competent at working with large, interdisciplinary groups on complex budgets and applications, sometimes in collaboration with other universities, the nominators wrote. And, because of her familiarity with the requirements of each grant agency, she is able to offer advice to maximize the likelihood of funding. She often works long hours to ensure that each project meets its deadlines.

All her nominators added that Euler remains even-tempered and friendly even under looming deadlines and when dealing with frazzled faculty. “Given that many investigators are in a stressed psychological state (to say the least), it is amazing how she remains cool and calm,” one nominator wrote.

As another added, “Robin’s approach to her work gives new meaning to the word ‘facilitate.’ Robin is truly invaluable to the University community.”

Before presenting the award, established in 1982 in recognition of his accomplishments and service to BGSU, Ferrari—like President Sidney Ribeau earlier in the program—praised administrative staff for their contributions to the University.

Ferrari, who retired as chancellor of Texas Christian University two years ago, also spoke to challenges facing colleges and universities, citing rising costs, competition for private funds and changing demographics as examples.

“No institution will be exempt from the fundamental changes in demographics,” including increasing numbers of students from minority groups, single-parent families and families where English isn’t spoken in the home, he said. In addition, society needs educated people who can think through moral issues and act on their beliefs, and “has never been more in need of ethical leaders,” he maintained.

“There’s reason to believe the challenge for higher education is to educate the next ‘greatest generation,’” he said, invoking Tom Brokaw’s homage to the World War II generation.

Also past president of Drake University, Ferrari spent 12 years at BGSU in various administrative positions, including provost, executive vice president and, in 1981-82, interim president following the death of President Hollis Moore.

“My family and I have been on a remarkable journey since the first day we set foot on this campus in the summer of 1971,” he said, noting that his children still refer to the 12 years they spent growing up in Bowling Green as “the golden years.”

Also at the Sept. 27 reception, ASC presented a special award to Executive Vice President Linda Dobb for distinguished commitment to administrative staff, as well as scholarships to eight BGSU students, each of whom is in the top 10 percent of his or her college.

The application process for the scholarships includes submission of an essay, references, a history of community service and an interview with the scholarship committee.

Scholarship winners included:

- Darcie Pike, a senior from Wauseon majoring in moderate/intensive special education (intervention specialist), who received $1,000.
- Stephanie Kreilick, a senior from Fremont majoring in early childhood education, receiving

Bioethicist named director of BGeXperience

What will happen when a dynamic new director joins a thriving and growing BGSU program? The University is expecting great things, says Dr. Donald Nieman, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. George Agich has been named the director of BGeXperience, which leads first-year students to reflect on their values and make thoughtful judgments about difficult ethical issues they will confront as students and later as citizens and professionals. The board of trustees approved the appointment Sept. 30.

A bioethicist specializing in applied ethics, Agich comes to BGSU from the Cleveland Clinic. There he was the F. J. O'Neill Chair in Clinical Bioethics and a professor of medicine at the Cleveland Clinic Lerner College of Medicine of Case Western Reserve University.

However, Agich is not entirely new to Bowling Green, having served since 1997 as director of a unique, clinical bioethics internship program for BGSU graduate students in philosophy. He holds the position of adjunct professor in that department.

He was also a professor of clinical medicine in the Department of Internal Medicine in Ohio State University's School of Medicine.

"This is a challenging and unique opportunity," Agich said. "I don't know of any other program like this in the country. The scope is incredibly large, and it is an inclusive program with faculty from across the campus."

At the Cleveland Clinic, Agich dealt with "real-world" issues in dealing with medical students, residents, doctors and the families of patients, said Nieman. He also held a joint appointment with the Transplant Center of the Cleveland Center Foundation.

Agich has consulted and published extensively on such topics as end-of-life issues, patient autonomy, aging, research ethics and mental illness. The author of two books and editor of two more, he has been a visiting scholar at the University of Cambridge and the University of Basel, Switzerland.

In addition to medical ethics, Agich has a strong background in business and management ethics, another dimension he brings to BGSU, Nieman added.

Before joining the Cleveland Clinic, Agich taught from 1988-97 at the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, where he was founding director of the school's Medical Ethics Program. He received his bachelor's degree in philosophy and English from Duquesne University in 1969, and his master's and doctoral degrees in philosophy from the University of Texas at Austin in 1971 and 1976, respectively.

Agich is exceptionally well qualified to lead BGeXperience to its next level, said Nieman, who has guided the program since its inception. The program, which was begun in 2002, has grown steadily and this year, for the first time, includes all first-year students at the University.

Plans are under way to expand BGeXperience to include a sophomore course and a senior capstone course with a strong component of values and ethics. A service learning opportunity will be added for future spring semesters.

Part of Agich's job will be to provide professional development for faculty and peer facilitators participating in the program, and to work with BGSU's academic affairs and student affairs offices to enhance student academic success. He will also serve as spokesperson for the program, assist in fund raising and promote research on values and civic engagement in higher education.

BGeXperience students arrive on campus shortly before the start of fall semester for an intensive, two-day introduction to critical thinking about values. Working in small groups with faculty members from various disciplines and a peer facilitator, they explore and begin to identify their own values, look at how values are implicit or explicit in everyday life and learn the University's expectations of them.

The students then take a general education course, taught by the same faculty member who led their group, in which they examine how values are expressed in that discipline.

Famed singer Marilyn Horne tutoring BGSU students this week

"Opera News" has called her "maybe the most influential singer in American history" and this week, she'll be teaching students at BGSU's College of Musical Arts.

Famed singer Marilyn Horne returns to Bowling Green Tuesday-Thursday (Oct. 4-6) as the inaugural artist of the Helen McMaster Endowed Professorship in Vocal and Choral Studies. She last visited BGSU in December 1996, when she gave a sold-out recital on the Festival Series.

Currently focusing on a "master teacher" career, Horne will privately coach voice students in the College of Musical Arts. She also will conduct two master classes featuring many of the same students.

The first master class will take place from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday (Oct. 5) and the second, from 2-4 p.m. Thursday. Both classes, to be held in Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center, are free and open to the public. No photography or audio/video recording will be permitted.

Horne's five-decade career in opera, concert and recital has been celebrated throughout the world for the power and artistry of her unique and dazzling mezzo-soprano coloratura.

In 1994, she launched the Marilyn Horne Foundation to support young singers in the art of the song. She is the vocal program director at the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara, Calif. In addition to her ongoing teaching and master class activities, she continues to perform in concert, specializing in programs that reflect her deep and abiding interest and experience, since childhood, in American folk and popular songs.

Helen and the late Harold McMaster established the endowed professorship in spring 2000. Helen McMaster, a longtime Perrysburg resident, has supported the arts at BGSU for many years. In 1992 she served as honorary chair of Bowling Green's Campaign of the Arts, to which the McMasters donated $150,000.

Generous friends of BGSU, she and her late husband have previously donated to programs in music, business, science and the Center for Photochemical Sciences. They established the Harold and Helen McMaster Professor of Photochemical Sciences position in 1993; helped to purchase a photoelectron microscope for the center in 1992, and gave the University a $1 million gift for the McMaster Endowment Fund, which supports the chemical sciences, in 1985.

Rolling Stone contributing editor to give Currier Lecture

Evan Wright, a contributing editor to Rolling Stone magazine and author of Generation Kill: Devil Dogs, Iceman, Captain America and the New Face of American War, will speak at BGSU Wednesday (Oct. 5).

As the 2005 Currier Visiting Lecturer, Wright will discuss “The Making of Generation Kill” at 7 p.m. in 202A Bowen-Thompson Student Union. A reception and book-signing will follow his talk.

Wright based “Generation Kill” on a series of magazine articles called “Killer Elites,” which he wrote for Rolling Stone while an embedded journalist with a Marine platoon in combat on the front lines during the first days of the Iraqi war. Wright won the prestigious National Magazine Award for Excellence in Reporting for the series.

Generation Kill is now being developed by HBO as a miniseries. Last March, the book received the J. Anthony Lukas Book Prize for Exceptional Works of Nonfiction.

Wright, who grew up in Cleveland and now lives in Los Angeles, has been a contributing editor to Rolling Stone since 1999. He has also written features for Time Magazine, ESPN magazine, the LA Weekly, Men’s Journal and the New York Times.

Wright was known as Rolling Stone’s “ambassador to the underbelly” for his unusually frank, in-depth reporting on youth subcultures—from inner-city gang bangers to radical environmentalists to runaway skateboarders in Hollywood.

His numerous awards include the L.A. Times Book Award, the Wallace Greene Award from the Marine Corps Heritage Society and the National Magazine Award for Excellence in Reporting.

Wright has been a guest on CNN’s “Lou Dobbs Tonight,” “The O’Reilly Factor,” “Hannity and Colmes,” “Hardball with Chris Mathews” and “The Dennis Miller Show.”

The Currier Visiting Lecture Series is made possible in part by an endowed gift from the estate of Florence and Jesse Currier, who came to the University in 1940. Jesse Currier established the University’s journalism program, and Florence Currier served as dean of women from 1949 until her retirement in 1963.

The Florence and Jesse Currier Fund at BGSU is used for journalism scholarships, faculty development, special projects and the annual lecture series, which brings distinguished journalists and media professionals to campus to speak and meet with students and faculty.

Arts Program are co-sponsoring her visit to BGSU.

A native of Corpus Christi, Texas, Elizondo Griest went to Moscow as an exchange student and studied at the Moscow Linguistics Institute while enrolled at the University of Texas-Austin.

She graduated from the university in 1997 with bachelor's degrees in journalism and post-Soviet and East European studies. She has written more than 200 articles for various publications, including the New York Times and Washington Post, and was selected by the Henry Luce Foundation to teach journalism for one year at China Daily.

Also among the Hispanic Heritage Month highlights will be Latinopalooza, on Oct. 15, and Latino workshops, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday (Oct. 6).

Latinopalooza will open outside the Union from 5-8 p.m. with disc jockeys, clowns, face painting, piñatas, contests and other carnival-type activities. The event will then move to 228 Union from 8 p.m. to midnight for dinner and entertainment, provided by La Revancha, a soft rock group, and Sammy DeLeon.

Thursday's workshops, in 202B Union, will educate students, faculty and staff about different areas of Latino culture. LSU will create displays to inform attendees about such topics as the History of a Piñata, Hispanic Men in the Military, Famous Latinos and the History of Quinceñera.

The month's events will begin today (Oct. 3) with a salsa night from 7-9 p.m. in 202B Union, followed Tuesday (Oct. 4) by a luncheon from noon-2 p.m. in 101 Olscamp Hall.

For more information about Hispanic Heritage Month events, all of which are open to the public, contact LSU President Hector Hernandez at 2-8325 or hector@bgsu.edu.

OhioLINK borrowing period extended

BGSU faculty, staff and students can now keep the books they borrow from other OhioLINK libraries for up to 15 weeks, as long as another user has not requested the materials.

“Users statewide have been asking to keep OhioLINK books longer than six weeks,” said Tony Maniaci, chair of OhioLINK’s Inter-Campus Services Committee, which sets OhioLINK borrowing policies. “Recent improvements to the software used for online borrowing check for holds before allowing a renewal. This new functionality allows us to extend the maximum borrowing period for items and better meet the needs of all OhioLINK users.”

OhioLINK books may be checked out for three weeks and renewed up to four times, as long as another user has not placed a hold on the item, for a total maximum borrowing period of 15 weeks. Users can request and renew OhioLINK books and local library materials online via the University Libraries Web site at www.bgsu.edu/colleges/library/.
