Administrative Staff Council salutes Ferrari winner
Barbara Hoffman

As Barbara Hoffman knows, if students aren't safe and healthy, learning cannot take place and the University experience is for naught. In her mission to improve the wellness of every student on campus, Hoffman touches lives—almost 15,000 last year alone.

As assistant director of the Student Health Service and health promotion coordinator at the Wellness Connection, Hoffman creates and leads programs aimed at keeping students free from dangerous drinking, sexual assault and other threats to their physical and mental well-being.

Her colleagues recognized her singular dedication at the Oct. 3 Administrative Staff Council Fall Reception by presenting her the 2006 Michael R. Ferrari Award.

The award honors administrative staff members who go above and beyond their job duties, demonstrate innovation and initiative and have a constructive relationship with the University community as well as their own work areas. It comes with a $1,000 cash prize, an engraved plaque that hangs in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union, and a reserved parking place for a year.

Hoffman has “taken the Wellness Connection to amazing heights,” wrote nominator Dr. Bettina Shuford, assistant vice president for student affairs, citing significant increases in the number of programs offered on campus and the level of involvement from peer facilitators. In addition to the students reached by those programs, wrote Dr. Glenn Egelman, director and physician in chief of the Student Health Service, “with Barb’s encouragement and guidance, for the first time BGSU students gained status as accredited Peer Health Educators through a national accrediting agency.”

After receiving the award, Hoffman noted that she recently received a birth announcement from a former student, who wrote on the back: “Thought you might want to see the next generation of peer educators.”

“Students do come first,” added Hoffman, who also thanked her family for their support. “I just really love to work with students.”

Cindy Fitz, a senior majoring in social work, said Hoffman always seeks student input on issues pertaining to students and asks them to participate in committee and coalition meetings. Calling her an incredible “resource and mentor,” Fitz said Hoffman has provided numerous opportunities for her to prepare for her profession after graduation.

She addresses personal issues such as drug and alcohol use and abuse, sexual assault awareness and prevention, and human sexuality, wrote Jill Carr, interim assistant vice president for student affairs and dean of students. “She addresses these topics in a direct and educational fashion, but the presentation emphasizes the need for preservation of each student’s dignity and creating an environment where students feel safe to ask questions or inquire about their own experience. As a result, students literally run to Barb’s office when they are experiencing a personal issue, concern or crisis in these areas.”

Through Hoffman’s collaboration with Dr. Terry Rentner, chair of the journalism department, the University has received $425,000 in grants to prevent alcohol abuse and has served as a model program for campuses across the country. “BGSU has seen about a 5 percent reduction in high-risk drinking over the last four years, and I think Barb’s efforts have contributed greatly to this change,” Rentner wrote.

She has also partnered with Janna Blais, associate athletic director and senior woman administrator, on a grant from the NCAA Choices Program to fund collaborations between University areas to promote healthy options. “Barb is always looking for ways to enhance the students’ experiences on this campus, and to my knowledge she has never turned down a challenge,” wrote Blais.

Her efforts are legendary, her nominators agree. She is in early in the morning and often stays until 10 or 11 at night. “She knows that students are more available in the evening, so she stays on campus until they are available to attend her programs or meet with her personally,” Carr wrote.

“Much of her work is beyond her job description,” Rentner said. “She will not say no if asked to give a workshop presentation, whether it’s a night or weekend. She so strongly believes in helping students and all members of the BGSU community to lead healthier lives.”

Dr. Egelman described her as a “peacekeeper in her home unit” and a “pillar of support for many of her colleagues” as the Student Health Service has undergone a significant transition over the past several years.

“You regularly see her at major campus events volunteering her services,” added Shuford. “Wherever she goes, she spreads her joy and enthusiasm with everyone she encounters.”

Other award nominees

The University is fortunate to have many dedicated administrative staff members, as witnessed by the number of nominations for the Ferrari Award this year. Other nominees were Bryan Benner, associate vice president for administration; Janna Blais, associate athletic director and senior woman administrator; Donna Colcord, clinic director in the communication disorders department; Pa’Trice Pettaway Day, technical support specialist, Information Technology Services; Judy Donald, director of Summer Programs, Continuing and Extended Education; Tom Gorman, assistant director of the University Program for Academic Success, Academic Enhancement; James McArthur, University Architect and director of the Office of Design and Construction; Connie Molnar, director of Interactive Distance Education for All Learners, Continuing and Extended Education; Dr. Craig Vickio, Counseling Center director, and Donna Wittwer, associate director of Human Resources.

Scholarships presented

ASC presented scholarships to seven seniors. The awards are based on financial need, grade point average and contributions to the community.

Those receiving $1,000 scholarships were Adam Balduff, a non-traditional student from Sandusky majoring in adolescent/young adult social studies, and Katy Cornell, a double major in psychology and history from Carroll. Receiving $500 awards were Lauren McNichols, an apparel merchandising and product development major from Chillicothe; Laura Nelson, a double major in broadcast journalism and general business from Hamilton; Emily Resnik, a double major in psychology and women’s studies from Cincinnati; Theodora (Dory) Rousos, a communication disorders major from Massillon, and Jennifer Stacy, an early childhood education major from Hamilton.

BGSU to host regional workshop on student success plans

Seventy representatives from 13 northwest Ohio public and private colleges and universities will be at BGSU Oct. 9 for a regional workshop on student success plans.

The Ohio Board of Regents (OBOR) is sponsoring the workshop, one of five statewide stemming from the regents’ request that each state institution of higher education develop and implement its own student success plan. The BGSU session will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in 308 Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

The workshops follow up on a two-day June conference of the regents’ Planning Committee on Higher Learning Accountability and Performance, which introduced its proposal for documenting the responsiveness of Ohio's colleges and universities to issues concerning assessment and accountability. Drs. Mark Gromko, vice provost for academic programs, and Milton Hakel, an Ohio Eminent Scholar in psychology, serve on the planning committee.

Development of student success plans was a primary point of discussion at the conference, according to interim OBOR Chancellor Garrison Walters. "The Student Success Plan would be built upon elements of assessment, learning outcomes and performance competencies that are already in place at many Ohio higher education institutions," Walters noted, adding that it "will allow the individual strengths of each institution to remain intact while all of Ohio's schools are linked by their commonalities."

The regents want each public institution's plan to define learning outcomes and assess student achievement of those outcomes both in general education and undergraduate majors; set higher expectations, as well as current standards, in content, competencies, abilities and successful completion of undergraduate education, and ensure the engagement of faculty and the entire instructional community in continuous improvement of student outcomes and achievement.

The plans' development dovetails with last week's announcement of a campaign by U.S. Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings to carry out recommendations from her Commission on the Future of Higher Education. Among her planned actions is providing matching funds to institutions and states that collect and publicly report student-learning outcomes. Spellings also intends to convene college accreditors and other higher education leaders and policy makers in November to help move the country's college accreditation system away from its emphasis on inputs "toward measures that place more emphasis on learning."

Calling them "the next step in a process designed to demonstrate the effectiveness of Ohio's higher education institutions," Walters described the regional workshops as "an opportunity to examine some institutional accountability plans and to discuss ways to leverage the differential missions and strengths of Ohio's colleges and universities in expanding access to information about student learning expectations.

"An expected benefit from the regional workshops is the ability to share with the Ohio General Assembly—at the time of the budget hearings for the next biennial budget in Spring 2007—the results of these workshops in the form of Student Success Plans for each Ohio public institution."

Hakel sees the initiative as providing a practical alternative to "one-size-fits-all standardized testing of college students. BGSU and Ohio can lead the way in documenting educational accountability while maintaining a sharp and clear focus on what really counts—student success."

The first draft of BGSU's plan was presented when OBOR met on campus last April. To see the current version, go to www.bgsu.edu/studentssuccess. More information about the regents' June conference and accountability in higher education, as well as student success plans, is available at www.regents.state.oh.us/accountability.

Emily Freeman Brown follows Silk Road to Kazakhstan

October finds BGSU conductor Emily Freeman Brown on the road—the Silk Road. Brown is in Kazakhstan this week and next for special performances in Almaty and Astana celebrating the opening of the new American Embassy in Astana.

The music director and conductor of the Bowling Green Philharmonia and Opera Theater, Brown will conduct the Academy of Soloists, a professional orchestra, in Astana and the student orchestra at Almaty's Conservatory of Music, where she will also hold workshops for students.

"This is a multifaceted opportunity," she said. "I have the chance to work with both professional and student orchestras. I'm very excited about that part of it."

Her visit is part of a series of cultural events called "The Splash" leading up to the opening of the new embassy in mid-November. U.S. officials in Kazakhstan are "very interested in making cultural connections" between the predominantly Muslim country and the United States, Brown said. Also, as a woman composer, her leadership can serve as a model for young women there. She was invited to Kazakhstan by a State Department cultural attaché she had met on a previous trip to Riga, Latvia.

"Kazakhstan is moving its capital from Almaty to Astana, a new city being built from the ground up," Brown explained. Located in the north of the country near Russia's southern border, it is the site of a new oil pipeline that will carry oil east to China and eventually to Western Europe. Almaty, in the far south near Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, is on the former Silk Road trade route through Central Asia.

One of the pieces Brown will conduct is "Chaconne for Violin and Orchestra," from John Corigliano's "The Red Violin," a piece about the Silk Road. Other American composers on the two programs include William Schuman, Samuel Barber, Aaron Copland, Samuel Adler and Leonard Bernstein.

For the Astana concert, Brown will also conduct a classical piece by a Kazakh composer based on traditional folk tunes and marches.

Though Kazakhstan is almost on the other side of the globe (a 22-hour flight from the United States), Brown has found connections there to Bowling Green. "I've made contacts through two BGSU graduate students in photochemical sciences who are from Almaty," she said. "They've given me good tourist information and cultural advice."

Because she will be in Kazakhstan on the Jewish High Holy Days, she has the rare opportunity to attend Yom Kippur and Kol Nidre services at the synagogue in Astana. "It's one of the oldest Jewish communities in the world," she said. "This will be a cultural experience I can hardly imagine."

Operatic tenor Jon Fredric West to appear at BGSU

The College of Musical Arts will host a visit by heldentenor Jon Fredric West, a 1974 BGSU graduate, as this year's Harold and Helen McMaster Endowed Professorship in Voice and Choral Studies.

Since earning his degree from Bowling Green, West has earned international acclaim for his portrayals of the heroic tenor roles of composer Richard Wagner and become known for his leading tenor roles as Canio in "I Pagliacci," Florestan in "Fidelio," Otello, and Siegfried in the Ring Cycle.

He has performed in many of the world's great opera houses—the Royal Opera Covent Garden, Metropolitan Opera, Lyric Opera of Chicago, Deutsche Oper Berlin, La Scala, Paris Opera and the Vienna Staatsoper—and worked with such esteemed conductors as James Levine, Zubin Mehta, Sir Simon Rattle, Seiji Ozawa and Michael Tilson Thomas.

During his residency, West will perform an all-Wagner recital with pianist Kenneth Bowen at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 4, in Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center. Free and open to the public, the program will feature works from "Die Walküre," "Lohengrin," "Siegfried" and "Tristan und Isolde."

In a special ceremony immediately following the recital, the University will present West with an honorary doctor of music degree in recognition of his contributions to the nation's musical life.

While on campus, the talented singer also will conduct master classes with BGSU voice students. Free and open to the public, the master classes will be held from 2-4 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 5, in Kobacker Hall.

Helen and the late Harold McMaster established the endowed professorship in spring 2000. Helen McMaster, a long-time Perrysburg resident, studied music at Defiance College and has supported the arts at BGSU for many years. In 1992 she served as honorary chair of the Bowling Green's Campaign of the Arts, to which the McMasters donated $150,000.

Silent Witness Project unveiling planned Wednesday

In observance of Domestic Violence Awareness Month, the unveiling of the 2006 collection of the Silent Witness Project's northwest Ohio chapter will be held Wednesday (Oct. 4), the Women's Center has announced. The 6:30 p.m. event will take place at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, 315 S. College Drive.

The Silent Witness Project was founded in 1991 in Minneapolis, in response to an epidemic of domestic violence murders in the community. Since then, local chapters have been founded in all 50 states. The BGSU Women's Center founded the northwest Ohio chapter in 2001.

The 2006 collection includes 40 freestanding, life-sized red wooden silhouettes, each bearing the name and story of a northwest Ohio girl or woman whose life ended violently at the hands of a husband, ex-husband, boyfriend or acquaintance. All of the Silent Witnesses were murdered within the past decade.

During the unveiling, the silhouettes will be revealed one by one in a solemn public ceremony. Each Silent Witness will be represented by a reader who will recount her story.

Last year, more than 350 people attended the unveiling, according to Dr. Mary Krueger, director of the Women's Center. Many who attended were family members or friends of the women represented in the collection, sharing their powerfully painful experiences of losing daughters, mothers and sisters to domestic violence. Family members will be present again this year, Krueger said.

Co-sponsors for the unveiling of the 2006 Silent Witness collection include the: Bowling Green branch of the American Association of University Women, Bethany House, BGSU Organization for Women's Issues, Cocoon Shelter, Destiny House, Family and Child Abuse Prevention Center, Open Arms Domestic Violence and Rape Crisis Services, Shay's for Life Foundation, Toledo Take Back the Night Collective, University of Toledo College of Law Domestic Violence Clinic, VITAL Program and YWCA Battered Women's Shelter.

Nuremberg colloquium open to campus

"The Nuremberg War Crimes Trial and Its Policy Implications for Today," a colloquium to be held on campus Friday and Saturday (Oct. 6 and 7), is now open to any member of the campus community who would like to attend.

Also free and open to the public are presentations of "Children's Voices: From the Holocaust to Darfur," by actor Bernard (Buddy) Elias, a first cousin of diarist Anne Frank, at 6 p.m. Thursday (Oct. 5) and 8 p.m. Friday. Both presentations will be in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union Theater. The University Women's Chorus, under the direction of Sandra Frey Stegman, will perform "I Never Saw Another Butterfly," based on poems by children of the Terezin concentration camp.
