Proposed BGSU Student Athlete Center gets major boost

A proposed Student Athlete Center will move closer to reality with a gift from a BGSU alumnus and his wife.

J. Robert "Bob" and Karen Sebo of Salem, Ohio, are giving the University $4.4 million over five years to fund several initiatives, including the Sebo Student Athlete Center. Their gift, the second largest in University history, will also expand the Sebo Entrepreneurship Lecture Series, support a WBGU-PBS documentary about successful regional entrepreneurs and enhance the College of Musical Arts with an expanded jazz studies scholarship and funding for a spring concert.

The gift announcement was made during ceremonies at 1:30 p.m. Saturday during Homecoming 2004. BGSU Foundation Chair Edward J. Reiter and Foundation President J. Douglas Smith, vice president for University Advancement, accepted on behalf of BGSU.

Sebo, who graduated from BGSU in 1958 with a degree in business administration, is a member of the BGSU Board of Trustees. He was involved in many successful business ventures including co-founding Paychex Inc., a top national provider of payroll, human resource, and benefits outsourcing solutions for businesses in the U.S. He spent 20 years with the company, retiring as senior vice president and partner in 1994.

The majority of the Sebos' gift—$3.5 million—will fund the construction of the Sebo Student Athlete Center.

The privately funded center, which will be located at the north end zone of Doyt Perry Stadium, will become the stadium's new front entrance. At approximately 33,500 square feet, the new two-story building will feature an expanded and state-of-the-art sports medicine and rehabilitation facility and a strength and conditioning area for all University student athletes.

There also will be football coaches' offices, a video equipment and viewing room, team meeting rooms and conference rooms to enhance facilities that are currently available. A heritage room and an outdoor pavilion overlooking the playing field are also planned. Cost for constructing the center is estimated at $7 million.

The Sebos are providing the lead gift for the Student Athlete Center because they believe a winning athletic program is central to Bowling Green's continued success. They have been long-time supporters of the Falcon athletic program, including a football scholarship they established in 2000.

"I think athletics are tremendously important for both the University and individual athletes," Sebo said. "Excellent athletic teams unite the student body so they can enjoy, love and support the University. This creates enthusiastic and engaged students who graduate to become proud alumni who support the University with their time, effort and money. With the new student athlete center, BGSU's student athletes will have the resources they need to build winning teams and learn about leadership, action and strategy."

In acknowledging the gift, BGSU Athletic Director Paul Krebs said, "The Sebos' generous gift to establish this new center will position BGSU intercollegiate athletics for continued success and provide us the resources needed to successfully compete within the Mid-American Conference and nationally."

Just as Sebo admires student athletes for their attitude, enthusiasm and dedication, he also appreciates those same qualities in budding entrepreneurs and musicians, which is why he and his wife have chosen to expand their support for the Sebo Entrepreneurship Lecture Series, the WBGU entrepreneurial documentary and for two important College of Musical Arts initiatives.

"I have tremendous admiration for entrepreneurs and want to give young people with the entrepreneurial spirit a fighting chance of making their dreams a reality," Sebo said. "One of the best elements of BGSU's entrepreneurial studies program is that students in all majors can participate. Chemists, musicians, engineers and artists can all nurture their natural talents while building the business skills necessary for success. Moreover, the stories about entrepreneurs featured in the planned documentary have the potential to reach, inspire and inform people beyond the campus community."

The gift includes $750,000 for the Sebo Entrepreneurship Lecture Series started last spring and $40,000 for WBGU-PBS to create a documentary on Ohio entrepreneurs.

"We are overjoyed by the reception our entrepreneurship minor is receiving from students and from supporters like Bob Sebo. As a trustee of this University and as a donor, Bob already has done so much to make this program one that benefits any Bowling Green student who has a passion for starting his or her own business. We are truly grateful," Robert Edmister, dean of the College of Business Administration, said.

The enthusiasm the Sebos have for athletics and entrepreneurship is also evident in their support for the musical arts. They are giving $75,000 to a jazz studies scholarship they previously started and to underwrite a concert by The Four Freshmen on campus.

"Bob and Karen Sebo are true friends of Bowling Green State University and the College of Musical Arts," noted Richard Kennell, dean of the College of Musical Arts. "Through their jazz scholarship, they help talented music students. For this measure of support, we are truly grateful. They also are funding a superior vocal and instrumental jazz performance by The Four Freshmen this spring that will bring great music to all of us at BGSU."

The Sebo gift to the various BGSU initiatives reflects their overall commitment and support of the University.

"As a University trustee, I have been involved with many departments and initiatives throughout the campus community. I am invariably impressed with the intelligence, enthusiasm and team effort demonstrated by BGSU faculty, staff and students. I think Dr. Ribeau is one of the finest university presidents in the country, and I am proud and happy to help the University in any way I can," Sebo said.

Licensing of BGSU patent, naming of new student-athlete center approved by trustees

The board of trustees approved two measures Oct. 15 that will enhance the University's positive impact on Ohio's economy and the lives of its scholar athletes, respectively.

In the first action, the board agreed to license a hybrid diesel/electric propulsion system for use in small transit buses to Goshen Coach of Elkhart, Ind. To encourage local business development and job creation, the University also has offered to forego 25 percent of its licensing fee if the systems are manufactured in Bowling Green.

The hybrid motor evolved from the Electric Falcon race car, College of Technology Dean Ernest Savage told the board, expressing thanks to Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur (D—Toledo) for helping obtain a NASA grant for continuation of the project.

The diesel-electric hybrid bus uses unique ultracapacitors that replace batteries and endure for the life of the bus. The motor conserves energy lost during braking and stores it for use in accelerating, Savage explained, saving fuel and money.

"We're very excited about the project," he said, adding that the bus would be on display at Homecoming.

President Ribeau commented that the commercialization of the patent and effort to bring jobs to the community help the University "take the next step from becoming the premier learning community in Ohio to an actively engaged university."

In the second action, the board approved the naming of a proposed Student Athlete Center after Trustee Robert Sebo and his wife, Karen. (See related story)

"The creation of this center will help us sustain excellence in the department of athletics," Trustee John Harbal commented.

In his report to the board, the president said that, based on what he has learned at meetings of the funding commission for higher education, "The budget situation for the next biennium looks challenging. What we're hearing is that a flat budget would be a good budget."

Noting the many large donations and pledges the University has received over the last year, Ribeau said, "Our alumni and friends are coming to our support when we are being challenged."

In other action, the board approved a provisional, formal definition of a "student" presented earlier in the Academic and Student Affairs Committee meeting by Tom Trimboli, special assistant to the president. The need for a definition arose from questions about students' privacy under the Federal Educational Rights and Privacy Act. Trimboli pointed out that, so far, the federal government has not issued a definition but has left it up to individual institutions. Faculty Senate and student government organizations will review the definition.

The board also approved the creation of a master's degree program in art education pending ratification by the Ohio Board of Regents. The degree, the only one of its kind in northwest Ohio, would fall under the College of Arts and Sciences, Associate Dean Liz Cole told the Academic and Student Affairs Committee, and would meet a need of area art teachers for the continuing education required to maintain certification. Designed to be highly selective and to operate on a cohort model, the program would admit from 6-10 students a year, most of whom are expected to be working professionals, Cole said.

The board also approved a change in the way merit raises are allocated for faculty. Now, the faculty merit pool will be divided 50-50 between the "meeting expectations" level and "exceeding expectations." Previously, the first 3 percent went to those "meeting expectations" with additional percentages going to those in higher categories.

Faculty Senate Chair Radhika Gajjala described the process of arriving at the agreement as "long and arduous."

In other faculty-related business, the board voted to approve a needed change to the Academic Charter covering not only the appointment of directors of schools but the re-appointment of those directors who are continuing.

California couple supports BGSU's values education initiative

A couple from Los Angeles has pledged $1 million in cash and deferred gifts to support BGSU's efforts to incorporate discussion about values into the academic and co-curricular experiences of all Bowling Green students.

Official announcement of the gift from Hugh Smith, a 1953 business administration graduate, and his wife, Barbara Smith, was made Thursday (Oct. 14) evening on campus during a dinner attended by board members of the Alumni Association and the BGSU

Foundation Inc., as well as by members of the University's Board of Trustees.

The gift will enable the University to increase the number of incoming freshmen who participate in BGeXperience: Vision and Values.

Now in its third year, the general education instruction incorporates critical thinking about values to make learning relevant and applicable to decision-making in everyday life. Initiated by President Sidney Ribeau, it is the only program of its kind at a public university in the United States.

About half of this year's 3,929 incoming freshmen took part in the BGeXperience introductory program prior to the start of fall classes. Assigned to small groups led by a faculty member and an upperclass peer mentor, participants began discussions about the role of values in decision-making and learned about academic expectations.

When classes started, the BGeXperience students enrolled in a general education course taught by their introduction group leader. The courses—which are limited to 25 students—cover the same subject material as “regular” sections but place a greater emphasis on learning critical thinking skills and how to apply these skills to values conflicts within the field of study.

“The Smiths’ contribution is an investment in educating our students to become thoughtful citizens,” says BGeXperience Director Donald Nieman, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. “Their generous support will enable us to reach all first-year students next year while involving upper-level students as well. We are truly grateful for their help in expanding this program.”

Smith has been an avid supporter of Ribeau's desire to ensure students graduate from Bowling Green with the critical thinking skills they need to weigh choices based upon the values they hold as individuals.

By pledging $1 million to the initiative, Smith said he, likewise, “is giving life to the ideas that I champion,” and noted, “Central to the new BGeXperience is the idea that we, as educated and responsible citizens, have an obligation to improve society—to give back for the gifts we received.”

“I think there is a tremendous need for universities to incorporate critical thinking about values into the entire college experience,” he continued. “We continue to see the devastating effects of people who operate from self-interest rather than from a solid foundation of guiding values. BGSU is one of the few institutions that is addressing values in a comprehensive way to transform and enrich the college experience so students graduate not just with job skills, but with skills to be productive and responsible citizens.”

Prior to retiring in 1998, Smith founded and served as CEO of Western Bank in Los Angeles. Active in Psi Kappa Psi social fraternity and the Interfraternity Council while a student, he currently is a member of the BGSU Foundation Board and of the University's Presidents Club.

The Smiths' contribution is comprised of a charitable remainder trust, a charitable gift annuity and a cash contribution.

‘Things They Carried’ author to visit campus

Many BGSU students have read Tim O'Brien's book, The Things They Carried. Now they'll have a chance to hear the author talk about it when he visits campus Thursday and Friday (Oct. 20 and 21).

O'Brien will give a public lecture from 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday (Oct. 20) in 101 Olscamp

Hall, followed by a book signing in the lobby outside.

While on campus, he will also meet with roughly 250 of the estimated 2,500 first-year students who have read The Things They Carried as part of this fall's Common Reading Experience. Those attending the three small-group sessions with O'Brien are in nine classes in the UNIV 100: University Success, General Studies Writing and BGeXperience programs.

O'Brien's visit is underwritten by a gift to BGeXperience from University alumni Ron and Sue Whitehouse of Harbor Springs, Mich.

The Things They Carried is a fictional work that depicts the men of Alpha Company who have survived their Vietnam tour. It was a finalist for both a 1990 Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Critics Circle Award, and received France's Prix du Meilleur Livre Etranger, the literary prize for best foreign book. In addition to incorporating the book into the curriculum for first-year students, BGSU is hosting discussions and other events related to its content throughout the semester.

O'Brien, an Army infantryman in Vietnam from February 1969 to March 1970, received the National Magazine Award in 1987 for his initial short story, "The Things They Carried." In 1999, the story was selected for inclusion in The Best American Short Stories of the Century, edited by John Updike.

O'Brien's books also include In the Lake of the Woods, which earned the James Fenimore Cooper Prize from the Society of American Historians and was named best novel of 1994 by Time magazine, and Going After Cacciato, a National Book Award-winner in fiction. His most recent novel is July, July, published in 2002.

The Minnesota native, whose short fiction has appeared in numerous literary and popular magazines, has also received awards from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Guggenheim Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts. He has been elected both to the Society of American Historians and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Current holder of the Roy F. and Joann Cole Mitte Chair in Creative Writing at Texas State University, O'Brien graduated summa cum laude from Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., in 1968. After returning from Vietnam in 1970, he pursued graduate studies in government at Harvard University and, from 1973-74, was a national affairs reporter for the Washington Post.

Bring the kids, trick or treat on campus this Wednesday

Children of the Bowling Green community are invited to trick or treat on campus Wednesday (Oct. 20), followed by a Halloween Fun Fest.

The annual event is sponsored by the Resident Student Association, the Inter-Fraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and the National Residence Hall Honorary. Children will be going to campus residence halls and Greek units from 6-7 p.m. and then to the Fun Fest in 308 Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

Admission to the Fun Fest is one canned good per person, to be donated to Martha's Kitchen food bank. Parents are requested to accompany their children to both events.

Parking for the event is in Lot N. Gather at the union for trick or treating.

Link locates BG@100 project members

The BG@100 project office is now located at 414 E. Wooster St., the former site of the AAA office. The BG@100 Project Organization link, at <http://www.bgsu.edu/offices/cio/page838.html>, outlines which team members are located at the project office and which have offices in Hayes Hall. Technology Fair offers exhibits, prizes

Exhibits and prizes will be the order of the day Thursday (Oct. 21) at the University's fifth annual Northwest Ohio Technology Fair.

The fair, set for 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., will welcome 57 exhibitors, as well as high school students from Delphos to Milan and even Put-in-Bay, to the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

Three "breakaway sessions" will be held in 201 Union. Among them will be an 11 a.m. demonstration by McGraw-Hill representatives of the company's student response system. The system involves student use of touch pads, 50 of which will be available for an interactive exercise at the fair. The first 50 visitors to the session may participate in the event, which will be recorded by WBGU-PBS for possible broadcast.

Other breakaway sessions will deal with the Xbox/Linux project, at 10:30 a.m., and computer security, at 1 p.m.

For more information about the fair, check the Web at www.bgsu.edu/offices/studenttech/techfair.
