

FACULTY RESEARCH AND EXPERTISE

FACULTY MEMBER

Amanda Cook

Department of Economics
accook@bgsu.edu
419-372-8085

BIO: Amanda Cook is an assistant professor in Economics at Bowling Green State University. She received her Masters in Economics from Vanderbilt University and her PhD in Economics from Purdue University. Her research interests are in health economics, econometrics, and industrial organization. She studies hospital reimbursement, health insurance, and health policy. Her recent work has focused on upcoding, the negative health effects of being uninsured, empirically modeling how hospitals and insurance companies divide surplus based on market characteristics, and theoretically modeling the health insurance market as a platform market. She has published in Applied Economic Letters.

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

- Health Economics
- Econometrics
- Industrial Organization

RESEARCH INTERESTS

- Hospital Reimbursement
- Health Insurance
- Health and Public Policy
- Access to and Equity in Healthcare
- Econometric Modeling

CONSULTING PROJECTS

- Analysis of employment data for US Together, a refugee resettlement group