CPR Small Grants Competition - Proposals due January 31

The Center for Poverty Research (CPR), located at the University of California, Davis, seeks to fund research that will expand our understanding of the causes and consequences of poverty. CPR anticipates funding up to 5 proposals, up to a maximum of $20,000 per award. More information is at this link: <http://economics.ucdavis.edu/faculty/ahstevens/grants2012.pdf>. Inquiries may be sent to poverty@ucdavis.edu.

Grant Opportunity for Junior Faculty and Researchers – Proposals due March 1

The Institute for Research on Poverty (IRP) seeks to fund extramural research that will enhance our understanding of the relationship of family complexity to poverty and public policy. IRP anticipates funding up to five projects, with a maximum award of $20,000. Grantees will benefit from consultation with IRP senior affiliates, with each other, and—during a workshop at which grantees will present their draft paper—with other senior poverty scholars. <http://www.irp.wisc.edu/initiatives/outreach/announce/IRP-RFP-Family-Complexity.pdf>.
