

CFDR Update: May 7, 2021

Early Career Scholar Opportunity

The Doris Duke Foundation invites early career scholars (e.g., doctoral students who are within a couple years of completing their dissertations; individuals who received a PhD in the last 5 years) to apply for membership in the Child Well-Being Research Network. The Network is comprised of 120 Doris Duke Fellows committed to conducting sound research to promote child and family well-being, and translating research to policy and practice. To apply, please complete the application form by May 31st, 2021. To learn more, please see visit <http://www.dorisdukefellowships.org/>

Call for Applications: Postdoctoral Fellowship in Health Disparities Research at UW Madison

The goals of the Health Disparities Research Scholars \(HDRS\) Training Program are to foster training opportunities for the next generation of investigators within health disparities research. HDRS provides training and mentoring at the postdoctoral level in interdisciplinary research that addresses disparities in health status and health outcomes among minority populations with an emphasis on maternal/child, adolescent and family health. Penn State's Annual Symposium on Family Issues – October 25-26

The theme of the 29th Annual Symposium on Family Issues is “Environmental Impacts on Families: Change, Challenge, and Adaptation”. The symposium will interrogate the role of the physical environment in family relationships, behaviors, and well-being, with a focus on three key dimensions: disasters, climate change, and the built environment. Registration is required. More information is at this link.
