School of Cultural and Critical Studies
Adjunct Instructor Position(s)

Details: The School of Cultural and Critical Studies at Bowling Green State University seeks strong applicants for our part-time teaching pool for Academic Year 2022-23 with assignments in the areas of: American Culture Studies (ACS), Ethnic Studies (ETHN), Popular Culture (POPC), Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies (WS), and Public History. In their letter of application, applicants should clearly identify specific courses and general field(s) which they are qualified to teach. Successful candidates may teach introductory courses in these fields including Black Popular Culture (POPC 1700), Introduction to Folklore and Folklife (POPC 2200), Introduction to ETHN (ETHN 1010), Introduction to WS (WS 2000), Introduction to ACS (ACS 2000), Cultural Pluralism in the U.S. (ACS 2500), Introduction to Popular Culture (POPC 1600); and Women and Interpersonal Violence (WS 3350). These courses may be in person, blended, remote (synchronous), or online (asynchronous). Qualified applicants may also be offered part-time teaching assignments in more specialized undergraduate and graduate courses in these units, including courses that contribute to the Public History graduate certificate such as Historical Society Administration (ACS/HIST 6570) and Museology (ACS/HIST 6540). Starting date of employment is August 2022.

Qualifications: Ph.D. in relevant discipline preferred. Minimum requirement is an M.A. Evidence of successful teaching at the collegiate level is preferred. For Public History positions, professional experience in the field is strongly preferred, and necessary for applicants without a Ph.D.

Application: Applicants should submit the following materials electronically to Amy Davidson, amyd@bgsu.edu, using the Subject Heading ‘SCCS PT Faculty Search’:
1) letter of application outlining qualifications relevant to this position—(a) Candidates are asked to clearly identify the specific courses and general fields within the School of Cultural and Critical Studies that they are qualified to teach in the first paragraph of their letter. For each course identified, describe how your experiences qualify you to teach it. “Qualifying” examples may include (but is not limited to): graduate degrees, graduate coursework, academic paper presentations, academic publications, exhibitions, professional experiences, prior teaching experience, workshops, seminars, and etc. (b) If candidates have online/remote teaching experience, they are asked to clearly describe the extent of that experience in the letter. Note: Candidates may be asked to provide credentials specific to the course that they will teach.
2) full curriculum vita
3) original transcript(s) indicating highest degree earned
4) two current (dated within the past year) original letters of reference to be sent directly from the recommender or a dossier service like Interfolio to Amy Davidson, amyd@bgsu.edu.

Finalists will be required to pass a background check prior to offer of employment.

Questions? Contact Dr. Angela Nelson, School Director, at anelson@bgsu.edu. Unless applicants request otherwise, applications will be kept on file for openings that may arise in future semesters.
