ACS 3000/WS 3000 - 104W - Online
Summer Session 1: May 14 - June 22, 2018
Girlhood in American Culture

What is an American girl? What does she look like? How young/old is she? How does she behave? What are her interests and goals? What does she desire? Whom does she desire? In this online course we will work to answer these and many other questions through an examination of multiple representations of girlhood in American popular culture. These will include films, novels; short personal narratives; music and music videos, and more! This course will consider the struggles that girls face as they are confronted by structures of gender, race, class, sexuality, ability, and citizenship. More importantly, we will consider the ways in which girls resist these structures as they forge and lay claim to their own identity, culture, and power.

For More Information
Instructor: Tessa Pyles
vtpyles@bgsu.edu
American Culture Studies