International ResearchScape Journal
International Studies Program • Bowling Green State University
Call for Papers: Deadline October 28, 2016

The International ResearchScape invites undergraduate students to submit scholarly papers for its fourth volume. The journal publishes and showcases outstanding student research on international issues. Undergraduates from all disciplines are encouraged to submit: research papers from capstone courses, class essays, independent research projects, honors projects, and other original documents. Diverse disciplinary, theoretical, and methodological perspectives are encouraged.

Students who have presented at the undergraduate BGSU Embracing Global Engagement conference are invited to submit their research projects to Dr. Christina Guenther (cguenth@bgsu.edu) for possible inclusion in the section, “From Praxis to Press.” These research projects tend to highlight intercultural experiential and service-learning opportunities through BGSU. Hoskins Global Scholars are invited to submit their research projects to Dr. Nathan Richardson (nrichar@bgsu.edu).

Instructions for Student Authors:

Submissions should range in length from 5-20 pages and should not have been published before. Papers may include, but are not limited to, topics that address American foreign policies, international business, colonialism and nationalism, intercultural communication, cultural studies, global environmental studies, world history, world literature, demographics, foreign language skills, globalization, and international experiences.

What to Submit:
1. An email attachment of the entire manuscript (as a .doc or .docx file). The manuscript should include a complete list of references in MLA format.
2. A cover page that includes the author’s name, mailing address, email address, major(s), minor(s), and expected date of graduation. Please provide your bgsu email address as well as an alternate.
3. A short abstract (50-100 words) that summarizes the paper.
4. A letter of recommendation from your instructor.

How to Submit:

Students should contact one of their BGSU instructors and indicate their interest in publishing a paper in the International ResearchScape Journal. Each student author should share an electronic copy of his or her paper with the instructor.

By submitting a paper to the instructor, the author (a) acknowledges his or her consent to publish the document in International ResearchScape Journal and (b) confirms that the paper consists of original, unpublished work. The instructor will review the submission; if the paper clearly focuses on global or international issues, the instructor will mentor the student and help him or her finalize the paper for publication. Once the instructor deems the manuscript fit for publication, the student will send the polished paper and the instructor’s letter of recommendation to the journal’s general editor (c/o bguenth@bgsu.edu) or the specific editor for From Praxis to Press (cguenth@bgsu.edu) or for The Hoskins Papers (nrichar@bgsu.edu).

Alternatively, BGSU instructors may identify student papers that fit the focus, scope, and caliber of this journal. Instructors are encouraged to contact students with exceptional papers and help them finalize their manuscripts for publication. Students should send a copy of the final paper and the instructor’s letter of recommendation to the journal’s editor (c/o bguenth@bgsu.edu).
